HOW TO READ THE DICTIONARY

instances marked = will acquire the vowel they need from elsewhere. Under very few situations can the vowel be dropped entirely.

STRESS/LENGTH PATTERNS

1 syllable - S

2 syllable - SU

3 syllable - USU

4 syllable - USUU

All other instances of different stress have a macron above the words in question denoted in the dictionary.

GRAMMAR

Laid out below are the grammar rules set in stone.

- (1) Adjectives occur after the central noun(not a req. in arts), with SVO universal.
- (2) Tōe is the default verb and thus does not need specification, except for when a quantity has been specified (default verb then is japa).
- (3) Between multiple distinguishable objects, use of jej and si is required between each object.
- (4) T= and y= are useful articles to use for the cause of disambiguating uses, but are otherwise optional.
- (5) When tomo is used in describing a place, tomo become an adjective to what occurs at that place(the content is prioritized over the place)
- (6) When compounding words, ending vowels where the last vowel is the same as the second to last can be removed. This can also extend to a degree to all unstressed vowels at the end of words.

- (7) The maximal syllable structure is CCVCC.
- (8) If a pronoun is used around the verb 'kata', subject position will mean that the noun is called the object, and in object position means the subject and object spoke to each other.
- (9) Places where words can conjugate their vowels can often merge with the first vowel of the second word, especially when no spoken consonants are between.
- (10) Words can compound, and this can be done to indicate that it is one unit of idea, and compounds are not as strictly bound to the first part of (1).

Phonemes

[p] (Pp)	[m] (Mm)	[w] (Vv Uu)
[t] (Tt)	[n] (Nn)	[l] (Ll)	[s] (Ss)
[k] (Kk)	[r] (Rr)	[j] (Jj)	[x] (Hh) ²
[ʃ] (Šš)	[f] (Ff)	[e]* (Ee)	[i]* (Ii) ((Jj))
[o] (Oo)	[u] (Uu)	[a]-[ə]* (Aa)

²does not always produce a sound.
